About the Election

Is the coming second Trump administration a threat to our constitutional republic? It appears that his cabinet nominees are selected for loyalty to the president. He said he will purge the civil service of whose ideology doesn't match the party, and of use the Justice Department to punish political enemies. He has aligned his party with Christian Nationalists. Donald Trump has shown in the past that he will not accept an election result that goes against him.

All this is scary. How can we respond and protect our democracy?

First, realize that resistance is possible. There are many factors that contributed to the republican election victory and the results should not be taken as a mandate on all of ex-president Trumps stated agenda. The majority of Americans share democratic values. The Republican Party is not a monolith, we can find common cause with much of it. We should make them aware of our concerns often by writing, texting, or emailing department heads and our congress persons as issues come up. We should join groups with shared values.

Lastly, I worked this last election and doing that always gives me confidence in American democracy and the electorate. I only hope this confidence isn't undue.
